The Department of Physical Therapy at the University of Rhode Island invites applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professor in physical therapy, with an expertise in teaching and scholarship that complements the mission of the Department, College, and University. The position will be an academic year appointment with an expected start date of August 2019. The Department is located within the newly formed College of Health Sciences and is part of the University's Academic Health Collaborative, which also includes the Colleges of Pharmacy and Nursing, and the Institute for Integrated Health and Innovation. The Department is recognized for excellence in teaching, service, professional leadership, scholarship, international opportunities for students, strong clinical education partners, and our on-site clinic. Annually, a cohort of 32 students are accepted and taught by a dedicated and experienced faculty. The Program received full (10 year) CAPTE re-accreditation in 2016.
