Opportunity for a Director of Physical Therapy Program, Associate Professor/ Assistant Chair in beautiful Northeast Florida

The University of North Florida is a metropolitan public university in Jacksonville, Florida and is accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges to award baccalaureate, masters and doctorate degrees to approximately 16,000 students.

The University campus is comprised of 1,300 acres surrounded by a natural preserve located merely 15 minutes from the white sandy beaches of the Atlantic Ocean. A city of bridges on Florida's "First Coast," Jacksonville is 30 minutes from the country's oldest city, St. Augustine, two hours from Orlando's theme parks, and has one of America's fastest-growing economies. Jacksonville is home to professional sports teams, an international airport, a waterfront downtown, and numerous entertainment venues.

About the Program

The Department of Clinical & Applied Movement Sciences in the Brooks College of Health offers the Doctor of Physical Therapy (DPT). The program typically admits 30-32 students each year and has a three year graduation rate of 96.67% and a 100% passing rate for the NPTE. The students and faculty participate in service-learning experiences at the local, domestic and international levels.

Description: The faculty have active research agendas supported by internal and external funding with dedicated research laboratory space. The faculty also participate in the education of physical therapy residents in a variety of specialties. The program is accredited by CAPTE and graduates are eligible to take the national licensure examination.

About the Position

The University of North Florida is seeking a physical therapist for a full-time, tenure-track position. Candidates must have an earned academic doctorate (PhD, EdD, ScD) and be eligible for physical therapist licensure in Florida; must meet criteria for Associate Professor; have six years of experience as a full-time faculty member in higher education; and three years of full-time experience in a PT education program.
