The USF Health School of Physical Therapy & Rehabilitation Sciences (SPT&RS) announces a search for a Director of Clinical Education at the Assistant/Associate/Professor level. This full-time, 12-month position will partner with the existing clinical education team (Co-Coordinator of Professional Education, 2 Assistant Coordinators of Clinical Education, and administrative staff) in leading our clinical education program as an integral component within the DPT professional curriculum. The School seeks candidates who will direct and shape the clinical education vision and represents this vision to constituent groups internal and external to the program and university. The Director of Clinical Education is charged with developing strong clinical partnerships that support the SPT&RS education mission including academic excellence, simulation, and interprofessional education. She or he is responsible for the professional development of the clinical education team and clinical educators. Opportunities exist to partner in post-professional residency and/or fellowship programs. In addition, the Director of Clinical Education will actively participate in professional activities that influence clinical education. Faculty rank, salary and start-up packages are highly competitive and commensurate with academic qualifications. Position may be tenure-accruing or non-tenure accruing and will remain open until filled.
