Emory University, Doctor of Physical Therapy Program

Musculoskeletal Rehabilitation Faculty Position

Emory University Division of Physical Therapy is seeking candidates for a full-time faculty position at the rank of assistant or associate professor for its expanding Doctor of Physical Therapy (DPT) program. Currently, the PT Division has 19 full-time and 5 part-time faculty members. We are seeking individuals with expertise in musculoskeletal rehabilitation. Candidates must have an earned doctorate degree, be ABPTS board certified, have an established record of teaching and musculoskeletal clinical practice, and be licensed to practice physical therapy in Georgia or eligible for licensure. Evidence of scholarly productivity and research is preferred. Responsibilities for faculty include teaching, clinical practice, scholarly productivity, advising students, and participating in University and professional service. Salary and rank will be commensurate with experience.

Description:

The Emory University DPT Program is a top-ranked educational program, consistently ranked in the top 10 by US News and World Report. In addition to being an outstanding educational institution, Emory University is also an important research institution with a wide variety of research centers on campus. Emory University is known for its exceptional clinical and research programs in movement disorders, stroke, musculoskeletal, cardio-pulmonary and vestibular disorders, and for joint Georgia Tech-Emory programs. There is an exciting potential for interfacing with resources throughout the Emory University academic medical center, related graduate programs, and the Atlanta community. The Division of Physical Therapy is a component of the School of Medicine and is located on the main campus in close proximity to a variety of affiliated clinical facilities.
